HEART THRILLING GEMS.

WHEN MOTHER LOOKS.

I remember such a lot of things
That happened long ago,
When me da' Jim was six years old—
An' now we're ten or so.
But t'was I remember best—
The ones I most can see—
Are the things that used to happen
When mother looked at me.
One time in church, when me an' Jim
Was snickerin' out loud—
The minister was prayin' an'
The people's heads was bowed,
We had the biggest kind of joke
About a bumblebee.
But things got quiet rather quick
When mother looked at me.
And then there's sometimes when I think
I've had such lots of fun
A-goin' in a swimmin' with the boys
Down there by Jones' run,
But when I got back home again—
Just 'bout in time for tea—
There's a kind of diff'rent feeling comes
When mother looks at me.
That time when I was awful sick
An' the doctor shook his head,
An' every time pa came around
His eyes was wet and red;
I remember her hands on my face,
How soft they used to be—
Somehow the pain seemed easier
When mother looked at me.
It's funny how it makes you feel—
I ain't afraid of her
She's about the nicest person
You'd find most anywhere;
But the queerest sort of feeling,
As queer as queer can be,
Makes everything seem different
When mother looks at me.
—Letchworth Smith.

NOBODY ELSE.

Two little hands so careful and brisk,
Putting the tea things away;
While mother is resting awhile in her chair,
For she has been busy all day,
And the dear little fingers are working for love,
Although they are tender and wee.
"I'll do it so nicely," she says to herself.
"There's nobody else, you see."
Two little feet just scampered upstairs,
For papa will soon be here,
And his shoes must be ready and warm
by the fire.
That is burning so bright and so clear,
Then she must climb on a chair to keep watch.
"He cannot come in without me,
When mother is tired I open the door—
There's nobody else, you see."
Two little hands around papa's dear neck
And a soft downy cheek 'gainst his own,
For out of the best so easy and bright,
The little once mother has flown.
She brushes the hair down away, as she thinks,
"Now he has no one but me,
I mustn't give away that would make him sad."
And there's nobody else, you see."

Two little tears on the pillow, unshed,
Dropped from two pretty eyes,
Two little arms stretching out in the dark,
Two little faint sobbing cries.
"Papa forgot I was always waked up
When he whispered good night to me,
O, mother come back, just to kiss me
in bed—
There's nobody else, you see."

Little true heart, if mother can look
Out from her home in the skies
She will not pass to her haven of rest
While the tears dim her little one's eyes.
If God has shed sorrow around us just now,
Yet his sunshine is ever to be!
And he is the comfort for everyone's pain—
There's nobody else, you see.
—Mary Hodges.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Pleasant Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

Knowledge is said to be power. Knowledge is power in the same sense that wood is fuel. Wood on fire is power. Knowledge on fire is power. There is no more power in knowledge than there is in the stones or stars which you know, unless there be a spirit and life in the knowledge, which give it its energy. In proportion as men have this spiritual power to they become strong in the world. Alexander McKenzie.

We owe it to the children that we keep step with a share of new fashions and customs; home has more charms for them when this is the rule. It is also easier to keep them interested in helping about the house if there is new and then a change; the use of an extra room gives more pleasure than is offset by the extra care, and at any time more detail in table setting and the serving of meals tends to refinement of manners.

Whether study is pursued for its own sake or for an ulterior purpose, one passion should occupy the mind of the student—the passion for truth. The true student must love truth; he must pursue it wherever it leads him, even though it destroys many of his most cherished illusions. He must cultivate self-discipline, patience, and a willingness to take pains, and, above all, he must remember that, if his study of things seen is pursued to the neglect of things unseen, knowledge will be purchased at a ruinous price; for, while study is good and knowledge better, faith is best of all.

To Forget and to Remember.

If we know how to remember what we want to remember and how to forget what we want to forget, we should be in possession of a fairy gift of good. In the lives of us all there are passages of which we are not proud. Now we have made egregious fools of ourselves; now a favored, trusted one has broken our hearts—at least we think so. Again, we have passed through such seasons of poverty and anxiety that to recall them is a nightmare. Let us pray for the blessed boon of forgetfulness. At the same time, while we pray, let us ever the way to have prayers answered. When you are overwhelmed with bitter, torturing memories, simply think of something else. You cannot do it at once or two or three times, but you can accomplish it in a few months or a year or two. To help drown bitter memories engage in some absorbing work and keep your attention fixed on the movements of your body while you work. Do not let your mind dwell on bitter regrets and the memory of losses.

But to remember the things we need to remember, the thousand and one little details of housekeeping, of business—that is another matter. Yet it can be achieved by the most accomplished, forgetful woman that ever set her glorious, skillful memory cap to rack and ruin. Every woman who has a slipshod, worthless memory herself has let it go to pieces.

Nature gave everybody a good memory to start with. Everybody remembers all it can. Its brain cells are fresh and receptive to the photographic pictures of events. There are millions of brain cells enough to furnish a fresh one for every event in the life of a thousand years.

To begin, every day, say, "Oh, I am getting so forgetful!" If you make a statement, it sticks, especially if you make it against yourself. You make others believe by your behavior that you are not so forgetful as you really are. Never say you are either stupid, forgetful or forgetful or anything else you would not like to be.

Draw your mental powers and your thoughts in from wandering like horses up and down the earth and enter them on the daily of the moment. Do not let them go higher and thinner like wild horses galloping over the plain. You can remember everything you need to. If through a wicked, hurried, hazy living up of mental impressions you have let your memory waste, stop it. It will help you to write to clear, large letters upon a placard that says "I can and do remember whatever I need to." Then suggest that by a ribbon of your favorite color when you will use it the first thing when you wake in the morning and the last thing at night make a powerful, determined effort to live up to it.

Next, force yourself to get a clear, sharp concept of mental pictures of all that comes before you. Visual pictures of things stay in the brain, and the taking of these mental photographs is the best means of remembering things. Make your pictures.

Again, never write upon paper what you desire to remember. Nothing, no card, the mental map, the tablet on which women have required, without the memory like written memoranda.

BUCKFIELD.

The high school, grammar and primary schools began last Monday, April 17, the other schools in town begin the 24th. Vernon K. Brackett of Millbridge Me., has been engaged as principal and Miss Helen M. Morton of Charleston as teacher in the grammar school. Mrs. Fred Record will teach the primary and "A. A. DeCoster and Miss Frances Arnold, assistants. Mr. Brackett has had three years in Colby and he had experience in teaching as principal of Millbridge high school and in the night schools in Lewiston.

Boston parties were in town Thursday buying horses. Norman Bessey and Lowellyn Jordan each sold them one. John Gerrish loaded a car of potatoes last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Whittemore received word that their daughter, Grace, who is visiting with relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y., has scarlet fever.

Mrs. Sadie Robinson is quite ill with bronchitis.

Dr. Head has been unable to attend to his practice owing to illness the past week.

There is a rumor that the Methodist Church is for sale. The membership of the society in this town is small. The departure of Rev. A. W. Pottle, who gave his services while he lived here, leaves the church without a pastor and it is reported to be for sale. The local Masonic lodge is understood to be interested and may possibly purchase.

Miss Adelaide Chesley, whose death occurred April 24th, lived with her sister, Mrs. Betsey Jordan near the Hebron line. Her funeral was held Wednesday, Rev. E. M. Lamb officiating. Miss Chesley was 84 years of age.

HELP THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL.

Everett Crocker, aged 17, of Cherryfield, Washington County, Maine, is a living refutation of the popular belief that a broken neck means death.

About four years ago this young man, while driving along the highway, near home, was thrown from his seat, by the shying of the team he was driving, he rolled to the back of the vehicle, his head caught between two stakes, and he was dragged a considerable distance. When released it was found that his neck was broken. No one in the town had a glorious memory before it learned to write. If you have a list of things to buy, set them down only in your brain. At first no doubt you will forget. Well and good. The more inconvenience you are put to at first, the less apt you will be to forget next time. So shall you keep your divine memory from running to decay. If you follow this system of memory training, you will come by and by to feel as though you have been guilty of a sin when you forget anything.

CHERRYFIELD.

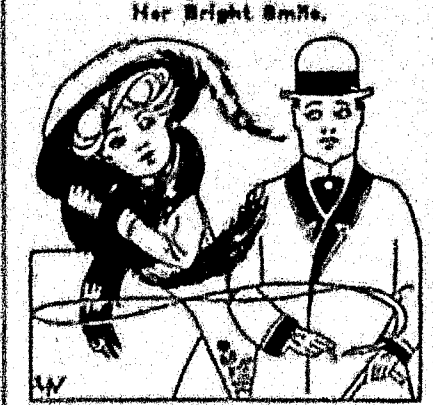

Cherryfield thought he would live; but he did. Life was anything but cheerful, rather it was a burden. His head dropped forward resting upon his chest. He could not raise it. All the time he suffered from severe headaches. Three years ago he entered the Children's Hospital in Portland. As a result of the treatment he received there the head has been raised to nearly a normal position, while the broken bones have knitted together. He now wears a large collar which is specially designed to hold the head in place, but will be able to dispense with it in a few months.

During the past winter he was able to work in the woods, driving a four-horse team for the Campbell Lumber Company of Cherryfield. He is now at work for a farmer at Knightville and visits the Daily Free Clinics at The Children's Hospital once or twice a month for treatment.

This is the hospital for which a fund of $25,000 is now being raised to keep it in existence. Its work is all charity. No patient paying more than $1 a day, while the per capita cost is $14.3 a day. Make your checks payable to the order of The Children's Hospital.

Send contributions to this paper, or direct to the committee in charge of the work, Room 615, Union Mutual Building, Portland, Maine.

THE BEST INVESTMENT OF ALL is in the improvement of your own soil. Farm lands in the West at their cheapest are far more costly than the lands in New England. Even in the newest opened sections, where the price per acre seems wonderfully small, and therefore most attractive to the homeseeker and wealth hunter, there are great items of cost not emphasized by the promoters who would entice immigration. Farming in most of these sections is impossible without water and it is through the sale of water rights that the capitalists who are exploiting these regions are making money and will make money, which the new settler must pay if he is successfully to work the land.

A very necessary factor in the raising of profitable crops is the reasonable use of the right kind of fertilizers, not only to stimulate plant growth and proper nourishment, but to improve the nature of the soil as well. It is a recognized fact that organic matter when added to soil opens the way to air and water, warms the soil and furrows plant food from the very start.

SWIFT'S ANIMAL FERTILIZERS are progressive fertilizers being made of Bone, Meat and Blood with High Grade Potash. They supply crop nourishment in a concentrated and predigested form.

THE SWIFT'S LOWELL FERTILIZER CO., 40 NORTH MARKET ST., BOSTON, MASS., issues a valuable little hand book of fertilizer information which is of interest to every progressive farmer.

TUBERCULOSIS CAUSES TEN PER CENT. OF CHURCH DEATHS.

National Association Reports High Death Rate From Consumption.

Statistics showing how serious a problem tuberculosis is to the ordinary church congregation were published recently by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in a bulletin on Tuberculosis Day.

From reports received from over 125 churches, with a membership of over 212,000 communicants of twenty denominations, and from 204 cities and towns in 12 states in various parts of the country, out of nearly 1500 deaths in 1910, over 700 or 46.4 per cent were caused by tuberculosis. This means 251 deaths for every thousand members of communicants.

While the percentage of deaths from tuberculosis as compared with other diseases is not higher in the churches, according to these figures, than in the country at large, the tuberculosis death rate, as shown by the church returns, is higher per thousand communicants than that for the general population in the United States of the United States, which the Census Bureau gave as 147 in 1902.

"The National Association," the bulletin says, "does not, however, compare the statistics derived from religious communities with those reported by the Bureau of the Census. A careful number of returns from a great variety of churches have been received. In addition to this that one of the most serious and profitable the only church has to consider, is that of the tuberculosis of its membership by tuberculosis. The need for education from the pulpits and in the homes is apparent. Every minister in the United States is asked to give this subject some attention during the next two weeks."

A WOMAN'S BUSY MINUTE.

Only a Glimpse of Another Woman, but That Was Enough.

"WILL you please tell us how the lady was dressed?" said the attorney for the defense to a witness who was testifying in a police court proceeding.

"Well, of course I didn't see her for longer than a minute as she got up and walked out of the street car we were both riding in, but she had on a wide gray fur hat turned up at one side and fastened with a rhinestone buckle, and she had a long white feather and a gray bird's wing on the hat and a narrow band of gold galloon around it and two large scarlet red velvet roses, and she had the hat fastened on with three hatpins, one of them with a red glass stone set around with California brilliants, and another was in the shape of a four leafed clover, and the third was a big gilt ball, and the hat drooped away over on the right side, and she had a black veil with white dots on it, and it was fastened with a gold arrow run through a rhinestone buckle at the back of the hat. Then she had on a tailored suit of mauve cloth, with the jacket and front width of the dress all braided in silk braid the same shade of the dress, and the other widths of the dress had three blue folds laid on one right above the other and the six buttons covered with goods like the dress, and the jacket had a black fold all around it, and fourteen buttons down the front and three on the pockets, and it had a wide rolling collar lined with satin a shade or two lighter than the dress, and there was a narrow silk cord of white silk edging the collar and coming all down the front of the jacket, which was a little more than half fitting, and it sagged just a trifle on the left side and—"

"Can you say that you saw the lady but a moment?"

"Yes, just for a moment as she was leaving the car, but I noticed that she had on a gray squirrel skin muff and tippet and—"

"That will do, madam. Next witness please come forward."—Push.

LOCAL HISTORY.

"Mr. J. M. Smith of Colorado, formerly editor of the Bethel Courier, was in town last week."

The first number of the Bethel Courier appeared Dec. 15th, 1888. Dr. Nathaniel T. True occupied the chair editorial at the date of the second issue. The paper was continued till July 2, 1891, when it was sold to the Oxford Democrat.

"The Bethel Trotting Club have completed the park grounds on the farm of Messrs. A. Mason, Esq. Mr. Mason agrees to furnish the ground two years free of charge. After that the club is to pay a rent. The track is one-half mile and will have a stand and all improvements. Bethel contains some fine horses and several can show speed. The track has been rolled with a four ton roller and is in fine condition."

An undertaker has possession of the "Club" as well as the "Trotting Park" but the club has not been given out to the public.

"Died on Nov. 10th, 18th inst. Mrs. Mary Cross, aged 78 years. Mr. Cross leaves two brothers and two sisters. His eldest brother, Isaac C. Cross, probably the oldest man in Bethel, is 69 years old. Three of the brothers were born the same month and the same day of the month, the 24th day of June. The oldest age of the two brothers and two sisters left is 231 years."

How Beautiful Than Bethel. Bethel, 18th, Bethel, July 17, 1888. To the Editor of the Argus:

There is no town in the country, for those who desire rest and release from the whirl of the city life, that can surpass Bethel, more beautiful, more serene, more beautiful.

Its lovely drives, its magnificent scenery, its mountains of more than local renown. I wish your readers could but gaze on the scenery which spreads before you as you look from the Bethel House across the lake, on the hills and valleys, with everywhere mountains for a background; it is a most interesting and impressive panorama.

The town of Bethel is situated about 15 miles from Portland, on the Grand Trunk Railroad. The town proper is divided by the Androscoggin into two portions: the village on the one side, the other portion being designated, simply as over the river. Of course in the village is the most life and animation.

On the mountain, at the side of the lake, a large number of the village boys seek daily to indulge in youth's favorite pastime, the great American game of baseball. It is interesting to watch them, for they seem to enter into the spirit of the game with more zeal, if such a thing is possible, than the average Portland boy.

In closing, I would recommend to those persons who are not desirous of visiting in the vicinity of Mt. Ararat, Hallowell and Newry, but who would prefer the peace and tranquility of the country, to think twice before they embark this pretty little town of Bethel, in the State of Maine.

"Portland Transcript, Oct. 31, 1888. Mrs. Mary Hastings, a niece of Hon. Daniel H. Hastings of this place, and a graduate of Bryn Mawr Academy, class of '87, now lives at Bethel, Maine. She was recently left in charge of a large flock of sheep belonging to her father. She was then standing with two wolves in her pen. She accused her father's wife and not herself of having the wolves and the sheep. The wolves were up the chimney early after she had fired the time at them, would say so."

"The 18th, Mr. and Mrs. John Wright of Bethel, celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding Dec. 15th. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were presented with a golden egg, which was once broken by Mr. Wright and failed to contain 25 dollars in gold. The wedding couple received many other presents."

"March 26, 1898. The Bethel News to the tune of a new local weekly was to be published at Bethel (N.Y.) by a Mr. John Jones."

"1888. However is the only town in Oxford County that has a treacherous surprise in the treasury, and it is a very easy matter to get rid of it. The Oxford Democrat says the town voted at its annual meeting to disburse with the amount of a tax and the election of a collector, and was the money in the treasury for the payment of State and county taxes and town charges."

"Query: For the Bethel Board of Trade. How much would the profits have had the amount been deposited in the Bethel Savings Bank at 3 1/2 per cent interest annually?"

"Oct. 1, 1890. A new street is being graded from Main to School street."

Same date. "Last week a mammoth bear and two cubs came out into Har- old Chapman's pasture, attacked one of his cows and made serious wounds upon her body, almost taking her pelt from her body. The old cow fought with all her might and made, finally driving the cubs away. In the towns of Mason and Orlow bears have taken almost the entire flock. Eliot Love- ley of the Bethel House and your correspondent will leave this week for the woods among the mountains of Oration, near Middle Back Mountain, where bears abound. Probably blood will flow freely."

EPIGRAMS OF THE SHOP.

Weekly Bulletin issued by a Cynical Manager Who Thinks He's Funny. The office manager of a wholesale house, who has something like 200 men under his supervision, each week issues a set of business epigrams to his assistants and department heads. This is what he said last week:

"In hiring a man ask him if he ever worked for any of our competitors. If he has take him on. You can get out of him in a week all he knows about the other fellow and fire him in two weeks if he isn't any good."

"Don't let past performances weigh too heavy in judging an applicant. Look at his eyes and chin. There's more to be learned in two minutes in a man's face than in ten years of his past record."

"If you think that one of your men has deceived his usefulness with us ask him if he can get another job. If he says 'Sure' and means it keep him with you. His usefulness probably is just fresh, not his. Hire him up."

"Don't for a minute let your men see that you know there is anything more important in the world than getting out the day's work. I know a man once who disappeared a whole department by talking ancient history during work hours."

"Don't overlook your office boys. The man who does the business was once an office boy."

"Remember, the growth of this firm and the increase of competition demand that this week's work be just a little better than last."

FEEDING GRAIN TO LAMBS.

They May Not Take to It Voluntarily, and Must Be Taught to Eat It. Do Not Starve the Lambs.

There is considerable difficulty in inducing lambs just weaned to take even eating food if they have not been fed at the troughs with their mothers in earlier days, and the weaker lambs and the more they require nutritious food the more trouble there often is. The plan too often adopted is to withhold the grain until winter. Then it is found that the more delicate have no heart to take to it at all.

Lambs can be taught to eat grain quickly as follows:

Get a fold in the grass field, in which place troughs. Supply fresh oil cake or corn or oats or a mixture every evening in the troughs. A little bran shortly cut hay chaff or something of that kind scattered over with meal or oil cake answers very well to start with, all being tempting. Then fold the young stock at night and release in the early morning. If an old fat-tailing ewe or two be run in with the lambs all the better. If this plan is practiced for a fortnight it will be found that practically every member of the flock takes the extra food with which and there need be no more folding done. It is important to keep the troughs scrupulously clean and dry and to remove any leavings that there may be every morning, for stale food spoils all, even the fresh, and the inclination to partake of the meal. The plan of containing lambs closely in their troughs and starving them to it is to be strongly condemned, for it weakens the workhorses as that they have, as before said, no heart for anything.

French pastures are the very making of the young stock, always provided that the troughs accompany the latter. Gradual introduction to soft green foods saves most trouble from colic and bloat, and here a little dry diet helps a good deal.

Remember and afterwards on the available feed not only give a change, but save the old pastures.

Peruna Secrets You Should Know

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic. Many thousands of pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

FROCKS FOR GIRLS.

As Usual, the Keynote For Their Style is Simplicity.

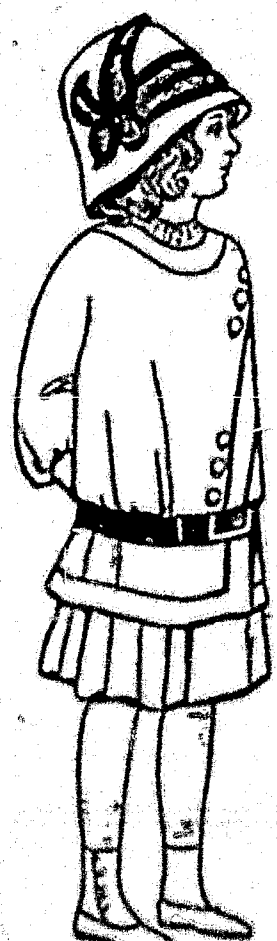

Hats to Match Are of Importance, and Buttons and Trimmings Take Prominent Part in Make-up of Dresses.

Simplicity is the keynote of children's frocks this fall. Colors are soft and artistic, and the two chief notes of novelty are the collarless frock, held over the season, and the hats that match the gown in fabric or color, or both, so that they obviously belong together.

Our illustration shows a Russian suit of navy blue serge with a low round collar and a turnback hem of the serge itself. The skirt is kilted, and the sleeves are full, with straight cuffs about four inches deep. The buttons are of dull silver, large and flat, and the belt is of patent leather. The charming little hat worn with this costume is a white felt with a "golden pheasant" wing effect in navy blue velvet embroidered in gilt. It is quite in mushroom shape, as many of the children's hats are this season. Another suggestion is a one piece dress of red cloth, buttoned over the shoulders, with a V shaped neck, and a slash in blue, red and black, loosely knotted on the left side. The buttons are of dull gold.

A pretty bonnet to go with this would be one of half mushroom and half poke of red felt, with a straight scarf of fur, an edging of the embroidery and a white lace trim.

A pretty party gown in modified empire style is another good idea. Make it of white voile does indeed, a material much used for children's dress frocks, and trim it with baby Irish insertion. It ought to be very good also in sheer batiste or tulle with silk, with Valenciennes lace and insertion. The sleeves can be twice puffed and made to end in a fitted cuff of lace. A straight band in front, with the path of edging, is very dainty and child-like. The panel and the low collar should be edged with narrow lace.

The hat to match is of all over lace with a turnback border of wired velvet and an ermine scarf around the neck. It is really a modified jockey crown, sitting off over the head in a bow.

These styles represent the best in Paris modes for children. The present frock is everywhere to be seen. The hats are mostly in poke or cap shape and the use of buttons as trimmings is frequent. Soft material hangings are used on suits and workaday dresses, lace insertion on more elaborate afternoon and evening frocks. However, the keynote, as we have said, is simplicity, and that must, above all, be observed.
